The Mirage Of Curricular Autonomy

Session Information

03 SES 03. Balancing Curriculum Regulation and Freedom across Europe (Part 2)
Symposium continued from 03 SES 01
- Time: 2014-09-02 15:15-16:45
- Room: B110 Sala de Atlas
- Chair/Discussant: Nienke M. Nieuwen/ Jan Berikvens

Contribution

The Mirage Of Curricular Autonomy

The Portuguese curriculum policy is rooted in a centrist tradition, which started to be challenged in the context of the educational reform of the late 1990s. The policy-makers’ discourse has been, for the past quarter-century, loaded with calls for decentralization and a number of measures with some decentralizing potential have been taken. A careful analysis of the main official documents, combined with a review of research reports, reveals that curriculum policy-making in Portugal is still very centralized and dependent on the prescription of detailed study plans and syllabi. These tend to be followed very strictly. Therefore, Portuguese schools are still far from becoming strong curriculum agencies.

Method

Yes

Author Information

Francisco Souza (presenting)
University of the Azores and CIEC (Research Centre on Child Stud